

Tellico Village Bird Checklist as of 09/02/2026

Below is a list of bird species seen within Tellico Village in recent years. Species portrayed in the “Birds of Tellico Village” video series are noted by the episode number in parenthesis. Please report sightings of birds not in the list below using the contact page of the Tellico Village Birding Club website: <https://tvbirdingclub.org/contact/>

Species marked with asterisks  are infrequent/rare visitors to the village. Some species that are not marked as such may be common in a particular habitat but not in others. For example, Eastern Meadowlarks are abundant in Kahite but are infrequent in the main village. Another example is Green Heron, which during the summer can easily be found if you kayak or boat along the lake shore where they prefer to nest, but are less likely to be seen if you do not get out on the water.

Many species, including both common and infrequent/rare visitors are seasonal. Some, such as Common Loon and Hermit Thrush, are winter visitors which head to their northern breeding grounds in the spring and return to our area the following fall. Others such as Blackpoll Warbler and Sharp-shinned Hawk, spend the warmer months in the north and the colder months south past Tennessee, and are therefore only seen for short periods of time in the spring and fall as they migrate through our area.
